4 REMS: Building safety from the ground up

Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategies as approved by the FDA are criticised and ways of making them more effective are suggested.

D Wylie McVay, Jr

6 Should our health records be online?

The benefits of online health records are considered to outweigh the risks, but clear regulations and guidelines are needed.

Amichai Shulman

8 Are regulatory agencies using too many resources in trying to “eliminate” risk from medicines?

Agencies may not be using their resources in the most efficient way and it is considered wise to prioritise risk and target efforts accordingly.

Dr Jytte Lyngvig

11 Safety Considerations with the eCTD

A number of changes to the electronic Common Technical Document are proposed to help to bring both Safety and Regulatory functions closer together. These would not only help the regulators but could also help pharmaceutical companies.

Michael Reynolds

13 Development of a new postgraduate training programme in pharmacovigilance

The Drug Safety Research Unit in Southampton, UK, has developed a new modular postgraduate course in pharmacovigilance (Certificate, Diploma and Masters) in conjunction with the University of Portsmouth, UK.
